Kimmie Coleman is a tenacious litigator who has honed her courtroom skills by developing a diverse practice under the guidance of incredibly skilled trial lawyers over the course of her career. She tried her first case within a year of being admitted to the bar and has since successfully litigated a myriad of legal issues, having achieved significant wins for her clients in matters involving insurance defense/premises liability, professional malpractice, and family law.

Kimmie focuses primarily on civil tort litigation, representing individuals, companies, and insurance companies in state and federal courts. She has also maintained a family law practice for her entire legal career, but is currently accepting family law matters on a limited basis to ensure that each of her clients receives the attention required to achieve their goals for the representation.

Kimmie spends her time outside of work participating in environmental and charitable initiatives in her Decatur neighborhood. She is also an aspiring artist with an Etsy store and can sometimes be spotted selling her art at festivals and markets throughout the Atlanta area.
