About

Robert Freyre has been practicing law for over 30 years primarily in the area of workers' compensation. During the course of his legal career, Robert has participated in hundreds of hearings and mediations. He has litigated cases involving minor injuries as well as catastrophic injuries including paralysis, loss of limb and infectious diseases.

Robert has extensive experience representing clients before the State Board of Workers' Compensation. He has litigated cases from the trial level through the appellate process.

Robert is also fluent in Spanish. His language skills enables him to effectively communicate with a broader portion of the population by eliminating language and cultural barriers that could impede the successful defense of a case.
